Is faux leather still leather?

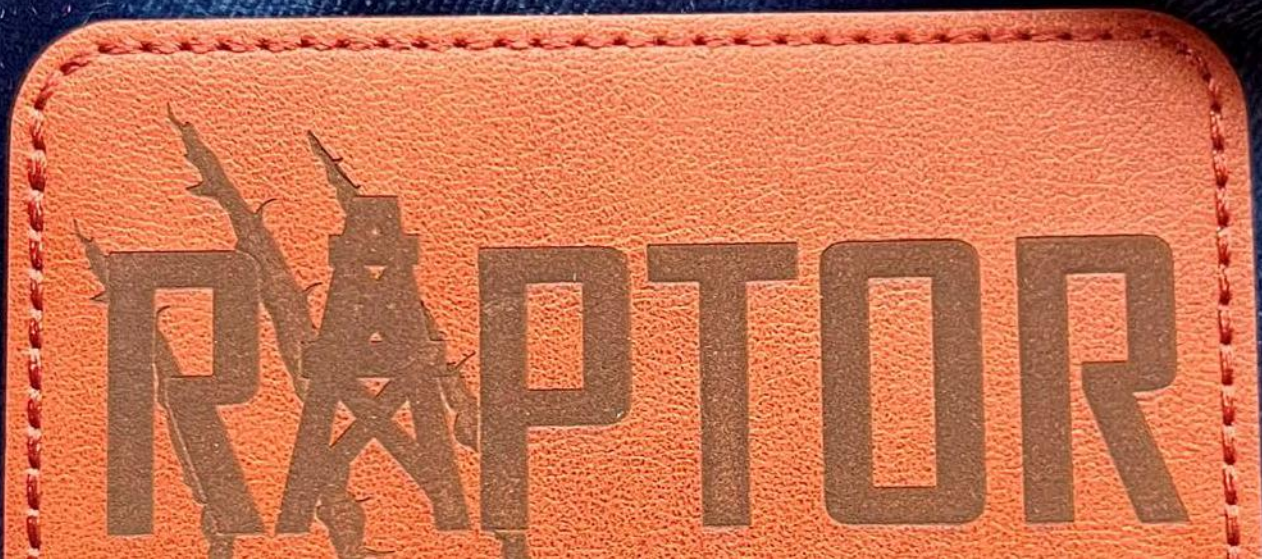

The fundamental difference between the two is that genuine leather is made from animal hides, such as cattle, buffalo or oxen. Faux leather is made from a plastic base and is then treated with wax, dye or polyurethane to create the color and texture. It can look and feel similar to real leather, but it has a wider range of colors and is more cost effective. Faux leather is water resistant and can withstand at least 25 washing machine cycles. In addition, Faux leather is thinner than real leather, making it easier to apply.
